

When the sun came up the next morning, they packed up their belongings and set back on the path.

Have you got your map Flint?

Look, we're nearly at the river!

When they looked ahead on Flint's map they were excited to see the river approaching. All three had been practising log jumping for weeks at the yeti village to help them cross.

